

DON'T SHARE YOUR MEDICATION WITH THE WATERSHED

Traces of medications can make their way through our sewer system and wastewater treatment facilities into our groundwater. This can happen when individuals flush unused medications down sinks or toilets. Since the wastewater treatment process is not designed to remove medications from the waste stream, traces of medications may remain present when treated wastewater is returned to the environment.

Learn more on proper medication disposal at Dispose-A-Med.

Website URL: <http://disposeamed.pima.gov/>