The Pima County Regional Flood Control District invites you to a virtual public meeting to learn and comment about the scope of the Brawley Wash Watershed Plan/Environmental Assessments (Plan/EA).

The project goal is to develop and study potential long-term plans to reduce flooding and erosion in the Brawley Wash watershed project area, restore natural floodplains and channels and improve wildlife habitat. This plan will include a strong environmental resource focus.

The Pima County Regional Flood Control District is conducting the study in cooperation with the Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and in accordance with National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and NRCS guidelines.

ENVIRONMENTAL RESOURCES TO BE ASSESSED

- Agricultural Uses
- Cultural Resources
- Wildlife and Endangered Species
- Erosion / Sedimentation
- Flooding
- Other Relevant Resources
- Water Resources
- Invasive Plant Species
